

ABSTRACT

Disclosed are sputtering targets and methods for making various nickel and cobalt base alloys into sputtering targets by melting the alloys in a vacuum or under a low partial pressure of inert gas and subsequent casting of the melt as round, square or rectangular plates in metal molds under vacuum or under low partial pressure of inert gas are provided. The plates are subsequently preheated and deformed between two flat dies.